Embedded Sensors Based on Novel Microwave Grating

Kenneth Smith/Xiao

ABSTRACT
This paper reports a coaxial cable Bragg grating constructed by crimping the cable at periodic distances. Two types of crimping methods are explored. The effects of varying the number of deformations per cable are also explored. Resonances were found in both the transmissions and reflection spectra, indicating successful Bragg grating.